Dear Rahul Soni,

Re: Kashyap v. Save Max Real Estate Inc.

We are pleased to inform you that the Ontario Superior Court of Justice decision in Kashyap v. Save Max Real Estate Inc. has been selected to be included in Thomson Reuters' Carswell's Practice Cases as well as its Litigator service. It was selected because our editors consider it an important case in Practice and Procedure.

The litigator service is a legal research service that provides access to a range of legal research tools, including convenient electronic access to publicly filed court documents regarding selected cases. Litigator therefore provides access not only to the court decisions, but also to pleadings, motion materials, facta and other publicly filed court documents regarding selected cases. The court documents are obtained from court offices, scanned and coded and made available both in PDF and HTML form. Ready access to this broad range of material allows lawyers and other researchers to get behind the reasons for decision and more fully understand important cases. It also means that lawyers interested in important cases have another option for access to the underlying court documents, rather than, for example, going to the court office or arranging for a process server to do so.

Your name appears as counsel on court documents filed regarding the above case. If you would prefer that any publicly filed court documents you authored in this case not be included in Litigator, please email Thomson Reuters to that effect at the contact information set out below. In doing so, please refer to the above case by name. Please provide your email request within 60 days of the date of this letter, and Thomson Reuters will respect your request.

If you need a list of the court documents regarding the above case on which you appear as counsel that would be included in Litigator, please advise us at the e-mail address listed below, and we will provide you with that information.

If you have any questions, please contact litigator.precedents@tr.com.

Regards,
